

Surgical Innovations (SI) was pleased to welcome a team of theatre nurses from the Leeds Nuffield Health Hospital yesterday, accompanied by SI founder and Nuffield Health Consultant Surgeon Professor McMahon.

The aim of the visit is to build upon existing relationships with the Nuffield operating team and offered a great opportunity for the nurses to see the devices, which they use every day in the operating room, being designed and manufactured 'on their doorstep' in Leeds.

Sister Sally Walker, Leeds Nuffield Hospital, said: "I found the visit to Surgical Innovations very interesting and it was a real eye-opener to see what goes on behind the scenes. Seeing the hard work and passion which it takes to design and manufacture these devices has made me truly appreciate the innovations which are being made in Leeds."
