

Continuing to increase their ever growing workforce, Surgical Innovations has taken on two University of Leeds graduates to join their Business Development team. Management graduate Chione Taoself will be UK based, and handle the internal reporting of the team, while Katherine Sloggett, a Political Studies graduate, has been employed to work on international accounts

CEO, Graham Bowland spoke enthusiastically of the new recruits, “2011 is set to be an exciting year for SI, and I’m looking forward to seeing our new employees settle in to the company and strive to take us to the next level. It just goes to show the excellent calibre of graduates we have in our city and emphasises our ongoing partnership with local universities in the region.”

More roles will be available across the business over the coming months. If you are interested in learning more about a career with Surgical Innovations contact HR at recruitment@surginno.co.uk
